The Daily Courant.

Tuesday, August 23. 1720.

London, August 23.

On Sunday arrived a Mail from Flanders, and Yesterday one from Holland.

From the Leiden Gazette.

Petersbourg, August 2.

THE Czar of Muscovy who lately went from hence to Cronslot, is gone from thence in his Yacht for Weybourg; but whether it be with Design to act in Person any where by Sea or Land before this Campaign is over, is not known: In the mean time it is rumoured here that his Fleet is put to Sea, either for some Expedition on the Coast of Sweden, or to observe the Motions of the British and Swedish Fleet. Baron Shaffiroff, the Czar's Vice-Chancellour is preparing to go to Olnitz to use the Mineral Waters there, during his Czarish Majesty's Absence. The Palatine of Mazuria, Ambassadour of Poland, set out to Day from hence, to return to Warsaw.

From the Amsterdam Gazette.

Vienna, Aug. 10. An Officer who arrived on the 7th Instant from Sicily, having delivered his Dispatches into the Emperour's Hands, his Imperial Majesty immediately sent for Prince Eugene, and conferred with him till late at Night: The next Day his Highness dispatched an Express to Naples, with the Emperour's Order for remitting as large a Sum of Money as could possibly be made up, to General Count Merci in Sicily; from whence we learn by private Advices, that the Annual Revenues of that Kingdom will be very considerable to his Imperial Majesty; they add, that the Jesuits draw from thence very near as much. The States of Hungary make Difficulties to approve a Regulation proposed by the Imperial Court for the Succession of that Kingdom, in case of the Emperour's Death without Male Issue: They are desirous to preserve their Rights of Election. M. Jagozinski, his Czarish Majesty's Minister, has not yet received a positive Answer from this Court on the Propositions which he has made in the Name of his Master; but we are assured he has been told, that the Emperour would be well pleased to see the Czar accept the King of Great Britain's Mediation for putting an End to the Troubles of the North.

Hanover, Aug. 20. The King of Prussia being expected at Herrenhausen the 16th Instant, the King of Great Britain went out at 7 a Clock at Night to meet him, but he did not come: On the 18th in the Evening Notice being brought that he was on the Road, his Britannick Majesty went out again, and met him about half a League from Herrenhausen. Their Majesties embraced at their Meeting with all Marks of Affection, and had a long Conference that Night at Herrenhausen in the King's Closet. To Day their Majesties were out together a Hunting; and passing by this City in their Return to Herrenhausen, the King of Prussia was saluted with a triple Discharge of the Cannon on our Ramparts. It is said his Prussian Majesty will go back to Berlin the 23d Instant. It is not yet certainly known what Resolution has been taken on the Affairs of Religion in the Conferences which the two Kings have had; but the last Express that came from the Earl of Cadogan at Vienna, is detained here, in order to carry new Instructions to him. The Earl Stanhope is very earnest on the Affairs of Religion, and has spoken of them in very pressing Terms to Count Staremberg the Emperour's Minister.

Hanover, Aug. 22. Yesterday about two in the Afternoon, their Britanniek and Prussian Majesties, with the Duke of York Bishop of Osnabrug, arrived here from Herrenhausen, and did the Earl Stanhope the Honour to dine with him: They came in a very magnificent Coach drawn by six fine Horses, with Livery-Servants on Horseback and on Foot, and attended by 14 Horse of the Life-Guards with three Officers. The King of Prussia sat on the Right, the King of Great Britain on the Left, and the Duke of York over-against them: This Coach was followed by two others drawn by six Horses each, in which were Lieutenant-General Schuylemberg, the Chamberlain de Bousch, and some other Gentlemen: Earl Stanhope, on the Approach of the King's Coach, hastened to it, and made his Complements to their Majesties, and his Royal Highness before they alighted, and afterwards conducted them into the Room where they were to dine; where their Majesties were pleased to stand talking together a while at the Window, to give an Opportunity to an innumerable Crowd of People of all Conditions, to see them. Their Majesties sat at Table till six a Clock, and then went back to Herrenhausen. Major-General Hammerstein lies at the Point of Death.
